SMOOT-HAWLEY BILL BACK TO CONFERENCE

Much Disputed Tariff Act Victim of Unforeseen Objection; Ready Monday.

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, May 28—The tariff bill went back to the conference today for another revision of its carefully written but much disputed flexible clauses.

Chairman Smoot of the senate finance committee, called the weary conferees together for a meeting tomorrow at which the task of drafting a new compromise will be undertaken. He hopes to submit a new conference report for debate in the senate by next Monday.

The bill was returned to the conferees as the result of an unforseen development in the long series of controversies that has attended the making of the measure. Vice-President Curtis sustained a point of order raised by a Democratic opponent of the bill.

This was based upon a contention that the conferees had exceeded their authority in drafting a compromise on the flexible provisions. Specifically, it was argued the rules of procedure had been violated by the insertion of language contained in neither the senate nor house draft of the bill.

The clause in question was that to make emergency changes in the customs rates proposed by the tariff commission effective after sixty days unless disapproved or put into operation sooner by the president. The point of order was raised by Senator Barkley of Kentucky.

This provision, projected by minority leader Garner of the house, had the approval of President Hoover but met with vigorous objection from the republican Independent Republican coalition of the senate. It represented an agreement worked out with much difficulty to reconcile the conflicting views of Mr. Hoover, the house and the senate.

The house measure provided tariff changes recommended by the commission should not become effective unless approved and made so by the president. The senate bill proposed to congress the chief executive's authority in this connection, and Hoover was in favor of such a change or discretionary action for the president, but willing to make concessions in the interest of a compromise.

Harding Senior Class Play Upholds Foreman Coached Show Reputation

"What Every Woman Knows," by Barrie, Well Received by Audience at Ohio.

BY HALLIE HOUCK
Marion Star Staff Writer

Each year Marion wonders if the Harding High school senior play will be as entertaining as its predecessors and each year Marion is agreeably reassured and pleased that Miss Lucile Foreman can select and direct plays that are a credit to herself, the school and the community.

Sir James M. Barrie's four act comedy, "What Every Woman Knows," was given last night to a well-filled house at the Ohio theater, and will be repeated tonight.

The noticeable feature of the Foreman plays is their finish. Not only are the lines well read, but the settings of her plays are not haphazard makeshifts. There are four different sets for each of the acts, and the time and social condition of the play is well brought out in the sets.

In Difficult Roles

John Shand and Maggie Wylie, played by Lowell Coulter and Mary Williams, are the center of the action of the plot. Both parts are difficult and both were well acted. Coulter was the self-assured confident politician, so sure of himself at times that the audience felt like giving him a lecture from the floor, and Miss Williams was a charming little Miss Wylie and later Mrs. Shand.

The three brothers were tip-top Quaint, humorous, loving, they watched out for sister Maggie and tried to make her see that she really had charm. Dwight Bargar played Alick Wylie, oldest of the three brothers, and his walk and the motions of his hands, portrayed this advanced age. James Barker was the tall, strong, comforting David Wylie who said "for to come" and "for to go." Eddie Ruzzo was the light-comedy man of the trio. He was James Wylie, impulsive and humorous.

William Thompson played Mr. Venables, sought-after politician whose opinions set John Shand's road in politics. Striking in a white silk wig, Miss Laura Wood played the vivacious, worldly-wise Comtesse de la Briere. Lady Sybil Lazenby, a modern home-wrecker who finally saw what she was doing and who really didn't love John Shand, was played by Jane Lust.

Production To Be Repeated Tonight; Cast Well Chosen and Well Directed.

Minor parts were cast as follows: Maid, Miss Twila Gilbert; first elector, John Costner; second elector, Robert Atkinson; third elector, Robert Knauss; the butler, Elmore Rush; the crowd, Jack Bell, Lee Kleinmaier, Harold Lindsey, John Hite; committee interested in woman's suffrage, Enid Little, Dortha Bull, Evelyn Young, Bernita LeMasters, Martha McGee and Clara Umapher.

The play concerns the poverty-stricken John Shand who is loaned 300 pounds by the three Wylie brothers to continue his education, on the condition that five years later he will marry Maggie. Maggie is sure that she has no charm. The Wylies live well, near their granite quarry at the Puns in Scotland.

Act two is six years later in the Shand's committee rooms at Glasgow. Shand has won the vote by his stand for women suffrage. Maggie is at his side, constantly helping him in her unassuming way and making him the figure he is.

In the third act the Shands have moved to London. The Comtesse has taken a liking to "Scotchy" as she calls Maggie, and the two are great friends. John Shand falls in love with Lady Sybil, Maggie overcomes an uncomfortable situation when her brothers call with a present in celebration of her second wedding anniversary. She knows that John and Sybil are infatuated and takes her own way of bringing peace and happiness to John and herself.

Maggie Philosophizes

There is humor and a touch of sadness in the last act, but things come out all right, with Maggie giving her philosophy of "What Every Woman Knows."

Music in the intermissions was furnished by the High school orchestra under the direction of T. R. Evans. The costumes, which brought many a chuckle from the audience as they went back to the days when they wore those same trappings, made a particularly good appearance from the front.

BAPTISTS URGE ENFORCEMENT

Staunch Stand for Support of Dry Law Taken at Convention.

By International News Service

CLEVELAND, O., May 29—With law enforcement and strict adherence to the prohibition laws as its main issues, the annual Northern Baptist convention opened its second session here today.

Nearly 3,000 delegates to the yearly meeting had registered today with the attendance expected to total twice that number by the close of the week.

Three important committee reports were to be made at today's business sessions. They include: a report on the relation of the convention to the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, its relation toward the proposal of union with the Disciples of Christ, and on prohibition and law enforcement.

Opening Yesterday

The meeting was opened yesterday with an address to the general assembly by President Alton L. Miller, of Boston. Although he ignored a discussion of the prohibition question, Dr. Miller declared that he favored prohibition and that the convention was for it 100 per cent.

The president told delegates that he purposely omitted a discussion of prohibition in his address because of the special report on the subject which is to be made today.

The report of the prohibition and law enforcement committee which is to be made this afternoon, calls upon the Baptists to "stand unwaveringly in defense of temperance and law enforcement."

Need of Times Cited

"The times demand men and women of faith and courage," the report continues, "men and women who are committed to the cause of righteousness and who will not waver or falter when the winds are contrary and who will not be thrown into a panic when the wets grow vociferous and boastful."

The committee on international justice and good will, in its report last night, made an appeal for ratification by the United States of the naval treaty on the limitation of armaments.

"If you give a girl too much to do, she breaks down; but if you give a boy too much, he does not do it", said Sir Henry Hadow, speaking on education in London recently.

"At the age of 3 months there appeared on the buttocks and behind the ears of my baby a very irritating and unsightly looking rash. Many remedies were prescribed and all were used faithfully without obtaining any but temporary results. Harassed by the untold discomfort caused the baby as well as the increased unsightliness I began, on the recommendation of a friend, to use Resinol Ointment. Immediately marked improvements were noted, and now, at the age of 10½ months, the child is without the slightest trace of his trouble." (Signed) Mrs. J. G. Reamer, Coshocton, O.

Seniors Dedicate Book To Miss Isabel Freer

"Quiver," Harding Annual, Disributed to Students at High School Today.

"The Quiver," Harding High school's annual book was distributed today at the high school. The book is one of the most attractive in several years and is dedicated to Miss Isabel Freer, instructor in French, with the following dedicatory paragraph: "To Miss Isabel Freer in sincere appreciation of her friendship and willing aid in all things, we respectfully dedicate this 1930 volume of the Quiver of Harding High School."

MISS ISABEL FREER

Edited by Miss Cheney

The publication, edited by Miss Catherine Cheney, editor-in-chief, and Miss Violet Doll and Miss Helen Dorsey, assistant editors, is bound in high-quality black leatherette, stamped with a drawing of Mother Goose and the name, "The Quiver, 1930."

A glance at the foreword of the book gives a clue to the entire theme. The foreword says: "Mother Goose books were childhood's first introduction to the literary world; and these later gave way to school books, growing more advanced as the years were put behind us. It is our wish that this volume may serve as a fitting close for our high school days, and that it may ever prove to be a treasure house for our memories of Harding high school."

Robert Smith and Rush Carskadden, art editor and cartoonist, have cleverly decorated the book. Smith drew a frontispiece of an old, old woman sitting at the base of a tree with a staff in her hand, telling Mother Goose stories to a little boy and girl. Smith's work printed in yellow, black and white, and humorous, well-drawn cartoons in black and white, by Carskadden illustrate the pages of the book. The two boys were highly commended by the faculty and annual staff for their works. Each of the departments is preceded by a drawing in yellow, white and black by Smith of some Mother Goose character.

This is the first year that individual pictures of members of the sophomore and junior classes have been printed. The two classes are given special departments for displaying these pictures.

Pictures of Faculty

The first part of the book is given over to pictures of George A. Bowman, superintendent of schools, K. H. Marshall, principal of Harding high school, the annual staff and pictures of the faculty. The senior section gives pictures of each class member, with the school activities in which the student participated.

Vernon Heights and Central Junior High school are each given two pages for group pictures, class rosters and history and individual pictures of the class officers.

All organizations of the high school are shown in a special section with a group picture of each organization, name of the officers, members and a short history.

The activities section is given over to pictures of the Junior plays, drawings of members of the senior play cast, debate, the May festival queen, Miss Dorothy Blake, and her attendant, Miss Ula McNamara, the Herald staff, band, orchestra, glee clubs and a page to Miss McNamara, writer of the words to the class song.

Section for Athletics

Athletics take up a section, with individual pictures of each member of the football and basketball teams, coaches and managers, and group pictures of the two junior basketball teams and the vocational basketball team.

The feature section is one which will highly entertain the class members in years to come. Carskadden cartooned each month of the year with a calendar of the important events in each month and a picture depicting the spirit of the months.

Photographs of faculty members taken on the school grounds in impromptu poses of the boys and girls in gay and giddy moments make this a valuable section of the book.

Another entertaining part of the book, carried on for many years is the catalogue of seniors with their middle names, characteristics, hobbies and ambitions.

It takes nerve to live in the big city—and nerves.

Daily Proverb—"Vice is the most dangerous when it puts on the garb of virtue."

Cape May county in New Jersey is importing an insect from Florida to fight mosquitos. Let's see. What was our purpose in importing English sparrows?

The University of Missouri professor who put out a sex questionnaire has lost his job as head of the psychology department of the university. Manifestly his psychology was bad.

Deets Pickett, of the Methodist board of temperance, told the senate lobby investigating committee, that Mr. Hoover was elected president by the churches and temperance organizations, and that the inefficiency of the Republican political organization was startling. Next we may expect the charge that the Republican national committee secured that big campaign fund under false pretenses.

A parade of 20,000 Spaniards in San Sebastian, staged as a demonstration for the reopening of the casinos there, developed into a riot in which thirty persons were hurt. It's simply amazing how anxious some people are to lose their money!

Miss Laura Ingalls, of New York City, made 980 consecutive loops out at Muskogee, Oklahoma, one day this week, breaking her own women's record of 636. What an invaluable aid Miss Ingalls' exploits are bound to prove in the development of commercial aviation!

The bills for the transferring of the prohibition bureau from the treasury to the department of justice and the expanding of the federal prisons have been signed by the President, but possibly the gunmen, gangsters, rum-runners and bootleggers may not take cognizance of the fact for some time to come.

Man Here Twenty Centuries Ago.

Assuming that man had his origin across the sea, whether in Africa, Asia or Europe it doesn't in the least matter, how did he come to America, from the east or the west?

There has long been a theory that Africa and South America were at one time connected by an isthmus over which the inhabitants of the so-called Old world made their way to the so-called New, and that land communication was subsequently broken when some great upheaval of nature caused the isthmus to disappear into the sea. There is much to support this theory. The configurations of the west coast of Africa and the east coast of South America go to support it, for they jut out toward each other as they would had there been such a connection. Again, many of the ruins of Mexico, Central America, Asia and Africa have great similarity and the figures carved in some of those on this side of the Atlantic are practically the same as the figures in some on the other side.

But doubt is cast on this theory of the westward movement of the human race by Dr. James A. B. Scherer, director of the Southwest museum. From Los Angeles, he has made announcement of the discovery in a cave, twenty-one miles from Las Vegas, Nevada, of articles which lead to the conclusion that America was populated by men at least 20,000 years ago, and possibly 30,000.

Excavating in this cave under layers of gypsum rock which took ages of time to form from overhead drippings, an exploring party led by Dr. Mark R. Harrington found campfire ashes, burnt wood and charcoal and over 300 articles of human handiwork which were intermingled with the remains of the extinct ground sloths, huge mammals of prehistoric times; and the remains of both extinct primitive horses and small prehistoric camels. The bones of the horses and camels are taken to indicate that the cave at one time was the lair of great carnivorous animals which dragged horses and camels into it and feasted upon them there. The finds, it is well to say, were made in seven distinct layers of the rock which was seven feet in depth.

The discovery has led Dr. Scherer to the belief that America was discovered originally by wandering groups of Mongoloids, who came from eastern Asia by the way of the Behring sea. And herein we have an explanation of the color and facial contours of many of our American Indians which can not be explained on the theory that America was approached from the east.

The contention of Dr. Scherer, that America was peopled over 20,000 years ago as the result of a migration from Asia, is seemingly well founded, but this does not estop a possibility that the scientists apparently have overlooked—the possibility that there was a movement to America from both the east and west.

Two Supreme Court Decisions.

Within the last two weeks the United States supreme court has rendered two very significant decisions, both of which have connection with prohibition enforcement.

The first decision to which reference is made established the right of innocent owners of automobiles or other vehicles which are seized under the Volstead law for the illegal transportation of liquor to recover their vehicles, and the court further held that the government may no longer seize vehicles under the Volstead law and confiscate them under the revenue law. Vehicles of innocent parties which are seized under the Volstead law can be confiscated only under that law, and it seems that congress, in enacting the law, made no provision for such confiscation.

Unquestionably great hardship has been worked to many innocent owners of vehicles and innocent holders of claims against vehicles by their confiscation while being used illegally for liquor transportation. Henceforth the hardship is liable to be that of the government in trying to make their cases good, and the name of innocent owners of vehicles engaged in liquor transportation and innocent holders of claims against liquor-carrying vehicles is bound to be legion.

The second decision of the court frees purchasers of liquor from bootleggers and rum-runners of the stigma of being law-breakers in the event that the illegal transportation of liquor and possession are not involved.

In delivering the opinion of the court Justice Sutherland stated that since long before the adoption of the eighteenth amendment, it has been held with practical unanimity that, in the absence of a provision to the contrary, the purchaser of intoxicating liquor, the sale of which was prohibited, was guilty of no offense.

Suggesting that congress may have considered it more important to make the purchaser available as a witness against the bootlegger, the court added, it had failed to enact any specific legislation making the purchase of liquor illegal.

Asserting the government for many years had not considered the purchaser guilty, the justice concluded, congress in enacting the Volstead act had "deliberately and designedly omitted to impose upon the purchaser of liquor for beverage purposes any criminal liability."

Thus the citizen who buys liquor from a bootlegger does not thereby lay himself subject to the appellation of "acoflaw." So far as the transaction of buying goes, unless, as stated, transportation and possession are involved, the purchaser had not broken the law, but he can claim very little credit to himself on that account for he has, by his purchase, encouraged the bootlegger in lawbreaking, and from the moral standpoint, that comes rather close to being a distinction without a difference.

But the man who purchases liquor from a bootlegger does more than encourage the vendor in law-breaking. He aids and abets in financing crime, and thus encourages crime in almost every form. The great flood of crime which is sweeping the country today has been largely encouraged, directly or indirectly, by the patrons of the bootleggers and rum-runners, and they can not escape their share of responsibility for the crime conditions such as at present exist.

Positive evidence has been found that the Mayans offered up human sacrifices, which goes to show that their civilization wasn't further advanced than our own up here in the United States save in the lesser number of sacrifices to the gods. Up here thousands upon thousands of human-beings are annually sacrificed to the gods of speed and impatience.

President Hoover urges the nation to cut the number of automobile accidents, holding that traffic has outrun the measures for safety. Maybe so, but a little enforcement of the law, now and then, against offenders might help the situation a lot.

Tomorrow Will Be Memorial Day.

The tempo of American life does not make much allowance for back glances. It is fast, hard and strong. The nation's forward vision is transmitted to her racing feet, her whirling machinery and the throb of countless engine pistons. There are times, however, when there are many things to be gained from an examination of the past.

Tomorrow will be Memorial day—an occasion for citizens of the United States to pay homage publicly to the nation's soldiers of the past. There are but few of the gray heads of the Civil war left, but the vacant places in the ranks of the union army have been filled many times over by veterans of other wars. Memorial day has become literally Soldiers' day in all states where it is observed.

The honor which a nation pays its departed heroes is the most fitting reward it can pay its living heroes. All they asked when the call came was that death in their country's service should not be in vain, and their fellow-men should not forget.

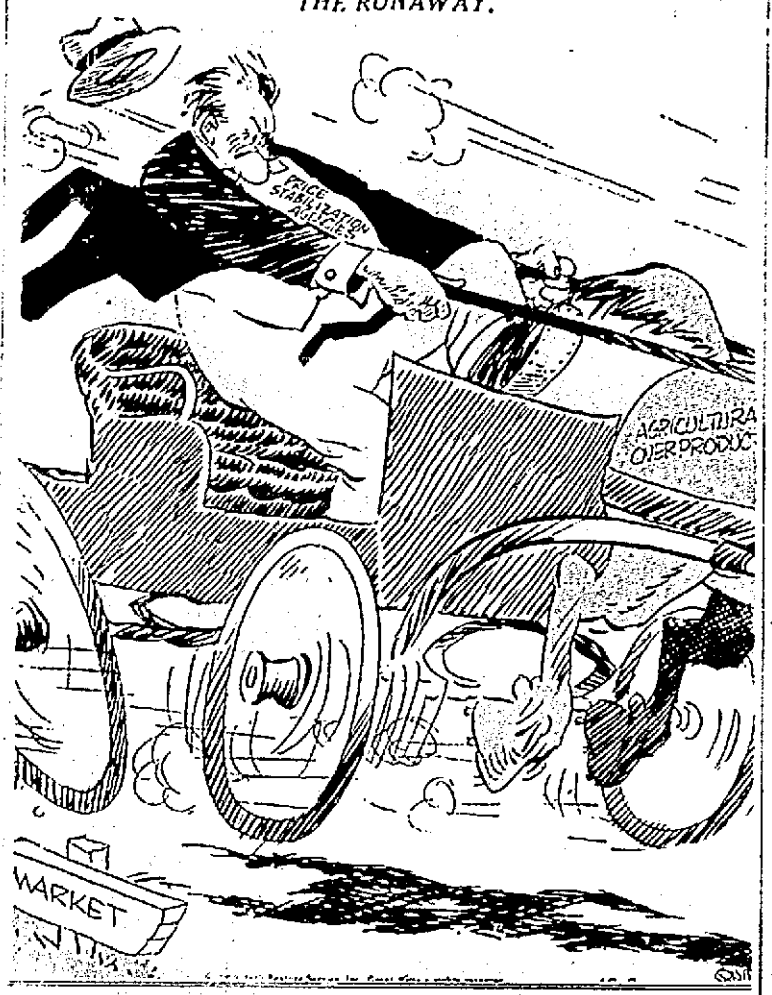
Memorial day is an annual opportunity to show them that the nation has not forgotten.

The 1,030-foot Chrysler building has been opened to the public, and New York City may now boast the possession not only of the highest building, but also the highest structure in the world made by the hands of man. This may possibly explain a recent item which came out of New York stating that that city was showing an "upward looking" trend.

The Century has been purchased by the Forum and the merged publication will be known as "The Forum and the Century." It was inevitable that they would be compelled to take such a step, with the public wedded to sports, the radio, comic strips and light fiction.

It is evident that cigarets didn't stunt the physical growth of fifteen-year-old Carl Pratt, of Omaha, Nebraska, who is addicted to them, for he is six feet and six inches in height and weighs 235 pounds, but the fact that he is under arrest there charged with highway robbery might be taken to indicate that they have affected his mentality.

THE RUNAWAY.



Editorial Opinion.

THE TREATY SESSION.

Congressional exigencies, especially with reference to the tariff, are making such inroads on the remaining days of the regular session that it has been found expedient to hold a special session of the senate for consideration of the naval treaty. Republican senate leaders and President Hoover agree that this has become the most feasible course. The senate will therefore remain on the job at Washington next month, leaving house statesmen free to attend to their political fences "back home" without further delay.

The treaty session represents a victory for the administration over the elements which are bent upon preventing ratification of the London pact. Their first objective was to delay discussion until next winter's session of the senate, in the hope that the interval would give them opportunity to manufacture fresh opposition ammunition.

The anti-ratificationists have been thwarted in this initial strategy. Even the big guns they brought up from the general navy board did not avail them. Our able, but anxious, admirals, who seem to feel that the safety of the republic is wrapped up in 30,000 tons of eight-inch cruisers—or materially less than three per cent. of the projected 1,200,000-ton treaty fleet—have thundered valiantly, and more or less persuasively, before the foreign relations and naval affairs committees, that the measure of the aid which the pact foes have had from their sailor allies is the prediction that, were ratification to come to a vote today, fewer than twenty senators would oppose it. Indeed, the commonest estimate is that there are not a dozen anti-ratification votes in sight at this time.

The navy will need all the friends it can muster when congress is asked to appropriate the huge funds required to build up to British parity. No calculation of their total is less than $800,000,000. Many reckonings put the gross cost at a round $1,000,000,000. If admirals are going to keep on talking, as some of them have been doing on Capitol hill, about a navy strong enough not only to defend us against Japan, but to attack Japan, not much imagination is required to conjure up the resentment that would find expression if the American people get it into their heads that our gallant sea dogs want a fleet for national offense, not merely national defense.

Exhaustive discussion of the London treaty is desirable. It is the senate's inalienable right to indulge in it before giving constitutional "advice and consent." But Americans who love the navy, venerate its traditions, and admire its officers and men must hope that the sailors will refrain from torpedoing a project which beyond any doubt represents the longing of the whole people for adequate, but not unnecessary, American strength at sea. If admirals think it the part of wisdom to go on shooting at the treaty, they are likely to discover that their range-finding, as far as congress is concerned, leaves much to be desired.—Washington Star.

THE AMERICA'S CUP.

Sir Thomas Lipton, at the age of eighty, will make his fifth attempt to "lift" the America's cup this fall. The Shamrock V, which he will bring over for that purpose, was recently launched and is reported to be behaving promisingly in the trials off Southend. The defender will be picked next month from four new and two old contenders for the honor of keeping the most famous yachting trophy in the world where it has rested for the last seventy-nine years.

The "cup," which ever since has borne the name of its first winner, was put up in 1851 by the Royal Yacht squadron at Cowes for a race around the Isle of Wight, with no time allowance and open to all yachts. The New York Yacht club sent over the schooner yacht, America, which outsailed fourteen competitors and brought home the trophy. Since then thirteen attempts have been made by British sportsmen to regain it. Sir Thomas Lipton has made the last four bids for it, with Shamrock I, II, III and IV in 1899, 1901, 1903 and 1920. This constitutes a record in itself. The untiring pursuit of a yachting trophy for more than thirty years, at vast expense and against the discouragement of repeated defeats, will stand to the credit of the genial Irish tea merchant, against all challengers.

The America's cup races have been the means of bringing about a camaraderie among American and British yachtsmen. Seldom have they led to any unpleasantness. The most serious disagreement arose over the race of 1895, when Lord Dunraven, who had brought over the unsuccessful Valkyrie III, was discruntled with the outcome and made certain remarks about American sportsmanship that threatened for the moment to make these Anglo-American contests a thing of the past. Sir Thomas Lipton stepped into the breach four years later and healed it. While he has failed four times to "lift" the cup, Sir Thomas always has been prompt to admit that the best boat won. This fine sportsmanship has endeared him to the American yachting fraternity. When he arrives for his fifth attempt, Sir Thomas will find in this country only one hope greater than that he may achieve his ambition—and that is that the trophy he seeks will continue to remain in the land whose name it has borne ever since he left the cradle.—Detroit Free Press.

Know Values and How To Eat.

BY ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

Why are some people undernourished? There are three chief reasons that underlie this so frequent condition. They are being unable to secure proper food, ignorance of the laws of nutrition, and a capricious appetite.

Here in America the vast majority of people who know what to eat can by one means or another obtain it. The problem is to get the right selection of foods.

There are a great many persons who, because of lack of proper exercise or some other reason have little or no appetite. They eat when they get a chance and are constantly nibbling at this and that. Nothing really substantial in the way of food appeals to them.

Lack of proper diet is at the foundation of undernourishment or malnutrition. You can see why.

McCollum, the eminent malnutritionist, has said that faulty diet does not often produce sudden consequences. Its results are slow, insidious and sometimes extremely difficult to recognize.

Nutritional failure leads to numberless vague, poorly defined states of ill health. The so-called "deficiency diseases," among which come beriberi, scurvy, pellagra, rickets, and others, have their foundation in the lack of a proper diet.

Diet should be considered as a whole, and all the essentials, the vitamins, carbohydrates, proteins and minerals, must be given equal importance. One of the most common mistakes is to have an excess of one of these food elements and a deficiency of another.

Thousands of people today indulge in a diet made up of refined foods. This is in direct contrast to the foods of the hardy mountain tribes of the Himalayas, who consume milk, eggs, whole grains, fruits and the leafy vegetables. People in those regions rarely have appendicitis or other stomach disorders. We need to get back to the coarser natural foods.

Resistance to infection depends much upon good nutrition. It has been demonstrated again and again that a liberal, well-balanced diet protects against bacterial invasion. Also it hastens recovery from an infectious disease. Tuberculosis is a particularly good example. Its cure lies above all in proper diet, fresh air and sunshine.

Poise and stamina are dependent to a great extent on good, nutritious food. If you don't have poise you soon have an unstable nervous system and lack of emotional balance.

It is absolutely essential that the undernourished person should eat much of the "protective foods." These should include an abundance of milk, eggs, liver and kidneys, green vegetables and fresh fruits, particularly the citrus fruits, strawberries and raspberries.

Unless the little child from birth receives a proper diet you can not hope to have it healthy. If the child is not breast-fed it should have the best of milk, orange juice or tomato or prune juice every day.

The nursing mother must supply herself and child with the foods that contain lime, iron, phosphorus and vitamins. She must include in her diet milk, eggs, a moderate amount of meat, and plenty of fresh green vegetables. And as the child grows most careful attention must be given the diet. Eggs, mashed and strained vegetables, meat, soups, white meat of chicken, lamb chops and simple desserts will make your youngster a hundred per cent. healthy.—Copyright, 1930, Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

Jupiter.

BY ARCHIBALD HENDERSON.

The insignificance and unimportance of the earth as a heavenly body are frequently stressed by astronomers. An excellent picture may be realized by drawing a comparison between the earth and Jupiter. The earth consumes a year in traversing its almost circular orbit, remaining at about 92,350,000 miles from the sun. This is a toy affair as compared with Jupiter, which consumes a dozen years in traversing its orbit at a distance of about 482,360,000 miles from the sun.

When the earth after a year returns to the same spot, Jupiter, meanwhile, has traveled farther on. The earth must then make up that distance, in order to be in opposition to Jupiter once more. By opposition we mean that the earth is exactly in line between the sun and Jupiter. Each year the date of opposition is retarded by about one month as compared with the previous year.

Even with a small telescope it is possible to gather some notion of the great size of Jupiter. This vast planet has a diameter of 87,792 miles, and its volume is 1,295 times that of the earth.

Conditions on Jupiter are markedly different from the comparative uniformity and stability on the earth. As Rudaux points out, we find nothing resembling this on Jupiter. Everything that we can distinguish on this planet indicates a marked instability.

It is characterized by dark and light zones arranged in a general way parallel to the equator, and whose number, importance, appearance and coloring vary from one time to another. The same observations apply to the numerous spots with which these zones are often covered. No really satisfying explanation has been found for these strange formations.

The days and nights on Jupiter follow each other with amazing rapidity. The speed of rotation is not the same for each zone of the planet, a considerable diminution taking place as we recede from the equator. On the average, Jupiter's rotation takes place every nine hours and fifty-five minutes. The duration of the day on Jupiter, then, is therefore only four hours and fifty-seven minutes. The inclination of the axis of Jupiter is almost nothing in angular size, with the result that the seasons are all virtually the same.

Jupiter is surrounded by an imposing retinue of nine moons or satellites. At night, one might see from Jupiter several moons at the same time. If we should, by some fortunate chance, be located temporarily on one of these moons we should behold wonders indescribable. Jupiter would appear to us then as a gigantic moon, with an apparent disc 8,000 times greater than our own moon!

Since the moons differ greatly in the rate of their orbital speed, they appear in the heavens in a great variety of beautiful configurations. It is as if some cosmic juggler were continually throwing huge silver balls into the air. Only two of these moons have apparent dimensions similar to those of our moon. Although there must be something strange and fantastic about this multiplicity of moons, the illumination is comparatively faint. The sky of Jupiter is heavily charged with vapors and perfectly clear nights must be comparatively rare.

Although Jupiter has nine satellites, only four of these moons are visible at the same time. These four moons shed a light which is only one-fifteenth of that of our moon at the same phase.

On the surface of Jupiter a man of average weight on earth will require great exertion to make even the slightest effort. He would only with the greatest difficulty be able to jump over an obstacle sixteen inches high.

A track meet on Jupiter would be a scream.—Copyright, 1930, International Feature Service, Inc.

New York Day by Day.

BY O. O. McINTYRE.

New York, May 29.—Blackmailing lawyers—and New York has passed its quota—use a threat of publicity as a leverage for shakedowns. And yet in nearly all the dimsy cases where victims refuse to be blanket it is seldom their names are dragged across the front pages.

The first move of a crooked lawyer to terrorize is to send anonymous tips to news agencies that so-and-so has been sued. As a matter of routine the agency calls up the victim. This is, of course, alarming, but means nothing. Respectable newspapers do not lend themselves to hi-jacking.

Hundreds of trumped-up extortions get no further than a news editor who promptly tosses them in the waste basket. Most men and women who submit to extortive efforts do so to protect the innocent, a foolish gesture. Even if scandalized by headlines it is a few hours sensation. The public quickly forgets.

A famous comedian of twenty years ago was involved in one of the reddest scandals Broadway ever knew. A year ago he happened to pass a group at a cafe table. One of the party mentioned the affair. Seven out of the eight other Broadway-wise had no remembrance of it.

Indeed a writing gentleman has compiled a long list of names of those who were notoriously publicized in thick eight-column streamers during the past decade. During their ordeal, they were discussed pro and con almost everywhere.

Among them—and how many do you identify?—were: Ocey Snead, Joyce Hawley, Robert Reidt, Joseph Robin, Mary Fagan, Bruce Ismay, Herman Koehl, Wilbur Huston, Caesar Young, Harold Bride, Fred Beauvis, Allie Jones, Clarence V. T. Richeson, Constantin Dumba, Vera Cathcart and Mary Louise Spas.

Nothing achieves such sudden prominence and nothing vanishes so miraculously as scandal. But swollen, ugly headlines will likely strike terror so long as human nature is what it is. And that is why blackmail flourishes. Blackstone said years ago: "Only a fool pays a blackmailer."

But you, Manuel Jose Santos, you yellow-bellied greaser, will not be here to see it, because you hang three weeks from today. Court's adjourned."

Before the soul can stand in the presence of the Master, its feet must be washed in the blood of the heart."

The Way of the World.

BY GROVE PATTERSON.

The few remarks made by the writer of the "Way of the World" about the things boys and girls do not seem to be learning in the public schools apparently struck a chord of interest in the correspondents. A letter from an Elkhart, Indiana, man says his daughter, a senior in high school, has been having an argument about the identity of the first president of the United States. The high school senior seemed to think the father says, that George Washington was not the man.

The writer is glad to be corrected by a Pittsburgh correspondent. The correspondent agrees that high school pupils are deficient in information, but calls attention to the sad fact that many grown-ups are just as poorly informed. And then the letter goes on to say, very much to the point, that "so many other things need correction which are simpler—the want of proper respect for teachers and elders, the observance of the good graces of refined society, the courtesy due to men and women of education and ability, and also a proper decorum and restraint in many of their actions."

Speaking of what young people are thinking about and doing, somebody writes the column asking this question: "Are the young people of today cultivating a spirit of unselfishness? Are they willing to forego any pleasure to accommodate someone else? Have they respect for their parents? And do parents respect their children when they allow them to be pert and saucy? There is a certain respect due the child, and no parent should allow his child to forget that in being respectful to his parents he is being so to himself."

The boy who goes to college and aims at athletic supremacy and little else is hopelessly behind the times. If he has any time left after the preparation of his lessons he will fit himself for a highly and increasingly competitive world by forgetting most of the athletics and going out for the debate team and the oratorical contests. Middle West colleges are doing a fine job in giving opportunity for discussion of vital questions in the form of debate. Not only do young men learn to speak in public, an accomplishment which in the future may spell the difference between success and failure, but they learn some of the fundamental facts of public questions. In a list of questions for debate in the Ohio Wesleyan schedule, and there are scores of other colleges doing the same thing, one reads these:

"Resolved, That the nations should adopt a plan of complete disarmament excepting such forces as are needed for police purposes.

Resolved, That the emergence of women into public life is a regrettable feature of modern civilization.

"Resolved, That professional lobbying should be abolished in Washington."

The Stars Say--

For Thursday, May 29

A VERY prosperous and progressive day is presaged from the generally benefic rule of the planets in important angles of the heavens There is a sign of much activity and initiative especially with negotiations with large corporations or combines, with the assurance of the fair ally assistance of the Great Benefic Jupiter to increase, expand and multiply It is a time for pushing toward high goals, while the powerful planets rule with expansive aura)

Those whose birthday it is are assured of a particularly enterprising and lively year under the benignant sway of the expanding and enhancing force of powerful planets New ventures and affiliations, with corporations mergers or secret societies are presaged to have splendid impetus It is an auspicious period for pushing to the goal of the ambitions

A child born on this day should be progressive, ambitious and enterprising with every prospect of achieving its desired goals in life, mainly through its own initiative and ability

For Friday, May 30

THE astrological operations for this day are to be interpreted as contradictory in their influence While employment is under excellent prospect, and the personal affairs are under the kindliest rule of the stars, yet there may be some devastating or frustrating conditions to confront There may be some undesirable and sudden change, accompanied by delays, obstacles or disappointment in attaining cherished aims Physical conditions of concern over elderly persons may be contributory factors to this delayed state of affairs

Those whose birthday it is may look for a year of rather contradictory conditions with success in employment and satisfactory personal relations but there may be abrupt change and stubborn obstacles to overcome There are signs of delays, postponements and setbacks, in which health may be a factor A child born on this day may have many talents, graces and accomplishments, fitting it for success in employment, but it may be restless, nervous and be called on to work hard for its ultimate success

38 CARS TO START IN SPEED CLASSIC

FOREMOST DRIVERS TO COMPETE IN RACE

New Type Cars To Add Color to 18th Renewal of 500-Mile Speed Trials.

By The Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS, May 29 — Roaring motors, scheduled to lark their battle cry at the Indianapolis motor speedway tomorrow in the eighteenth annual 500 mile automobile race, were given their final inspection today by their thirty eight drivers and mechanics

The track was closed for a chemical bath intended to remove all the oil that has dripped from the cars during the last thirty days' practice period Following a drivers' meeting late today, however there was a likelihood that the boys would be given a chance for a few final tuning spins

The 38 cars which qualified for the event mark the largest field that has participated in a 500 mile race since 1911 For many years the racing authorities limited the number to 33 but the expansion came with the elimination of the supercharger and the passing of the single seater speedway models

Qualifying trials which began last Saturday, ended at sundown yesterday Eight drivers put their hopefuls through their paces on the final day to swell the field to its unusual proportions

America's foremost speedway drivers a host of youths who have won their way into major racing through dirt track training and two foreigners—Baconi Barzi cabinet Pelleroni (uncertain of Italy—will compete for the $115,000 cash prizes

Louie Meyer, American driving champion, Peter Depaolo Wilbur Shaw, Shorty Cantlon Lou Moore and Billy Arnold who rode to recognition by piloting his mount faster than any other to qualify, are among three in the race All are known through out the racing world because of feats of the past

No or in the history of American automobile racing has there been such a varied collection of cars for one major contest The listing of the 91½ cubic inch piston displacement limit this year brought in all types of four six eight and sixteen cylinder creations

New Type Cars Enter

Where some of the veterans started with the conventional racing car—long, narrow, and low hung—there departed into new hulls Two cars which are virtually stock and are equipped with their large, sports model bodies will pit their speed power and sturdiness against the spidery creations of others L J Corum, Indianapolis co winner with the late Joe Boyer of the 1921 race here, will drive one of the large cars

Pete Depaolo, one of the most colorful drivers in America and champion in 1925 and 1927, will drive a medium sized job with an eight-cylindered motor nearly three times as large as that he had a year ago Motors range in size from th same as in 1929 to four times as large

New cars and old ones rebuilt for this battle of miles will face the starter at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning For example, last years winner, which the late Ray Keech piloted, will be handled by Frank Farmer of Philadelphia And Dave Lewis' old front drive—the first to be run in modern racing and which finished second in 1927—will be under guidance of William (Speed) Gardner of Pittsburgh

Cars will be lined up three to a row, with Arnold, by virtue of the fastest time for the 10 mile qualifying trial—114.208 miles an hour—in the pole position Others will follow in order of the speed they made and their order of qualifying

YANKS ENTER SIXTH ROUND OF PLAY FOR BRITISH GOLF TITLE

Jones, Voight Win Easy Fifth Round Matches; Jimmy Johnston Victor.

By International News Service

ST ANDREWS, Scotland, May 29—Bobby Jones and George Voight carried the American banner proudly aloft into the sixth round of the British Amateur golf championship by winning their matches impressively and with ease in the fifth round this morning Jones shooting a great 33 to the turn won by 7 and 6 from G O Watt, the Englishmen Voight, having a par 36 to the turn beat William Campbell, of Walker Cup fame, by 2 and 2

Harrison Johnston, the American champion joined Jones and Voigt in the sixth round by winning from D C Murray, another Englishman, by 3 and 2 Johnston was equally impressive He had par 6 to the ninth to be 2 up and simply ran right over Murray on the incoming nine Unfortunately, this meant that American ranking pair must cross paths at last They will meet in the sixth round this afternoon

Johnston got the jump on Murray by winning the first two holes with par 4s and never relinquished the advantage The Briton managed to square the match at the fifth, with a birdie 4, after Johnston had lost the fourth with a buzzard 5 But the American champion came back to win the sixth and ninth to be 2 up and then won the tenth eleventh and twelfth to clinch matters Lesson further debate

Voigt's opponent for the afternoon round will be the veteran Englishman W. L. Hose, who beat George Wadell, Edinburgh, by 1 and 3 this morning Dr Twedell the old champion will meet Sutton in another sixth round match The former defeated DeForest this morning 7 and 5 while Sutton won from Dawson, by 1 and 3

Francis Ouimet American champion of another and better day passed out of the British amateur golf championship in the fifth round this morning The Bostonian lost to Lister Hartley, by 1 and 3

VON PORAT BACK IN SPOTLIGHT WITH WIN OVER TOUGH GAGNON

Batters Boston Cob to Canvas with Right Hand Smashes for Kayo.

By The Associated Press

CHICAGO, May 29—Otto Von Porat long, rangy Swede as a fighting man without a real fighting heart, has bounded back as one of the outstanding candidates for the heavyweight boxing championship

The angular Norwegian regained his standing and completely belied his soft hearted reputation at the Chicago stadium last night by batting Jack Gagnon knockout conqueror of Tuffy Griffith to the canvas after six slashing rounds

The knockout victory was perhaps the most impressive turned in by Von Porat since his invasion of America Aiming heavy right hand smashes skillfully at his fast moving target, the big Norseman was as relentless in his attack as he had been forceful in previous fights Six times he felled the Boston gob before he put him down and out for the count The more courageous Gagnon became as the face of the heavy attack, the more furious became the barrage of punches

Von Porat's impressive victory probably blasted whatever chances he had of getting a match with Griffith a match that probably would draw a large indoor or outdoor crowd but it also placed him in line for bigger game. The stadium matchmaker is now seeking a bout for him with the winner of the Jack Sharkey Max Schmeling fight for the heavyweight crown

SEIBOLD TURNS BACK PHILS FOR 5-1 WIN

Hurls Ninth Game of Year for Seventh Win; Cubs Gain in National.

BY HUGH S FULLERTON, JR.
Associated Press Sports Writer

THE current performance of Harry Seibold veteran pitcher of the Boston Braves, is one of the most amazing things in the National league struggle Back in the days when Washington had a pair of pitchers named Nick Altrock and Al Schacht and a young left hander hailed appeared on the Boston Red Sox roster as Geo Ruth and was considered a good enough batsman to appear in a world series game as a pinch hitter Socks Seibold was a regular hurler with the Philadelphia Athletics

A decade ago Seibold disappeared into the minor leagues and little more was heard of him until he appeared at the top of the International league list with Reading in 1928 The Chicago Cubs called him from that farm to use as trading material and sent him to the Braves Seibold had a fair season last year winning 12 games and losing 17, but it was not until the start of the 1930 race that he really began stepping out

Has Won Seven Games

So far in a race only two months old Seibold has pitched nine complete games and has won seven of them He has not yet been removed from the hill, taking his complete turn every five or six days with a remarkable degree of success in a close race He held the Phillies to six hits yesterday and won his seventh victory by a 5 to 1 score in the first game the teams have been able to play this week Giving usually only one hit an inning Seibold went along at a steady pace while his mates picked away slowly at the hurling of Phil Collins and Grover Alexander for eight blows one of them Walter Berger's eleventh home run of the season

Seibold's leading rival for starring honors in the major leagues Walter Stewart of the St Louis Browns traded right along behind him yesterday completing his eighth contest in ten games with a 4 to 2 victory over the Detroit Tigers Stewart also has won seven games but has been defeated three times

Rally In Eighth Wins

Giving away two runs in the first inning Stewart pitched shutout ball for the next seven frames while his mates rallied up into a tie in the seventh and won out with a two run rally in the eighth The victory put the Browns into sixth place moving the Chicago White Sox to seventh by a few points In games the two rivals of yesterday and the White Sox are tied for the head of the second division twelve games behind the leading Washington Senators

The Chicago Cubs moved up to an almost safe place in the National leagues first division by winning the remaining contest of the three which started the rain and cold of yesterday By defeating the Cincinnati Reds 6 to 5 the Cubs made their margin over the New York Giants a full game Chicago assailed Benny Frey the ace who had held them to one run in two previous games for five counters in the first inning Hack Wilson hit a triple with two on base and Kiki Cuyler followed with a fluke home run that bounded into the right field foul line and in spite of frantic efforts to get the Cubs off to a start that the Reds could not quite overcome.

Dave Harris the Chicago White Sox rookie hit a home run the first time he faced a major league pitcher

COMMERCIAL LOOP GAMES POSTPONED

Four more city recreation league baseball games were added to the 10 games already postponed when wet grounds and cold weather kept the Commercial league from exercising its talents yesterday. There are now nine games in the Commercial, four in the Sunday School No 1 league and one in the Industrial which must be played off at a later date.

This afternoon at 6 the Industrial league will attempt to play their third game unless weather interferes. There will be games played on Memorial day

NUMEROUS SALAD IDEAS AVAILABLE

Different Plan for Every Day Possible for Lettuce and Tomato Combination.

The great American salad—meaning lettuce and tomatoes—could be served every day in the year, and yet be different every time, because of the change in the dressing used. French dressing is usually preferred by most persons (especially men) but it doesn't always have to be the same.

To begin with, the French dressing can be made so as to suit any taste. Some like it more acid, some like it more oily. The standard is as follows:

Plain French Dressing
- 3 tablespoons oil,
- 1 tablespoon vinegar,
- ½ teaspoon salt,
- ¼ teaspoon pepper.

Place the salt and pepper in a cold bowl and rub with the oil, then add the vinegar slowly. Use at once.

A great improvement on this simple sauce is, to break a small clove of garlic in half, then with a spoon rub the sides of the salad bowl with it before adding the other ingredients. Throw the garlic away after tincturing the bowl with it—by no means let it remain there.

An easy variation to French dressing is a change in the spice used. Instead of pepper, a little curry or powdered ginger may be used.

Chocolate May Be Made Food or Mere Flavoring

CHOCOLATE may be a food, more or less fattening or merely a flavor, depending on what one uses. The richest substance is chocolate, which contains all the fat of the natural product. Cocoa is chocolate with the fat removed, hence safe enough for children and in lean diet. But the most innocent of all the chocolate family are the crushed cocoa nibs which are merely the shells. They have to be cooked for a considerable time to extract the chocolate flavor, and the liquid thus obtained is merely liquid with no food value whatsoever. But it has a very pleasant chocolate flavor, although it resembles weak tea in color.

For children cocoa is somewhat better than chocolate, and if the child is disposed to drink too much of it then milk that is merely flavored with a little cocoa is desirable. A simple service is made by adding to one cup of hot milk one teaspoonful of cocoa stirred to a paste with a little warm water, and boiled for a moment.

Hot Chocolate (for Four)
- 2 cupfuls milk
- 2 cupfuls boiling water
- 1 tablespoonful grated chocolate
- 2 tablespoonfuls sugar
- Few grains salt
- 1 teaspoonful vanilla

Mix the chocolate with a little cold water and then gradually add to the boiling water, continuing the cooking for fifteen minutes. Add the milk and cook ten minutes more, then remove from the fire, add vanilla and whip to a froth with the egg beater.

Pour into cups and top each with a spoonful of whipped cream or a single marshmallow.

Many prefer to cook cocoa or chocolate without sugar, and it is sweetened in the cups as preferred. This is a better method for too often cocoa and chocolate are overpowered by the cook and then nothing can be done about it.

Picnic Pleasures Increase With Suitable Equipment

ABROAD a rucksack, some combination utensils and cutlery are the main pieces of picnic equipment. Most picnicking is done after and equipment must necessarily be light. Wherefore there have been devised many ingenious, compact contrivances in limited space bottles three in one fork, knife and spoon folding cutlery pans and so on.

But here, where a picnic is usually the wind up of a motor trip, it is possible to do it in more comfortable style even on the average modest purse. What with vacuum containers for hot and cold foods it is quite possible to serve in the open practically anything that would appear on the dinner table at home. And at the right temperature, too.

Not Expensive

If picnicking is a frequent family habit then it pays to invest in sufficient equipment to cover any occasion. The individual pieces are no longer expensive and with reasonable care they last a long time. All lacquers are now made with replaceable linings, so that in case of accident there is not the expense of duplicating the item but the smaller cost of repairing.

Nested containers are good buys for then several kinds of food can be packed inside of one case. They come in many sizes—gallon jugs in which there or four sandwiches can be packed each containing another food, meat, vegetable or what you will. Or, if larger parties are the rule, then the container with two nested saucepans of larger size may be more practical.

Saucepans, cups, or even pans for frying come with handles that fold either around the side or underneath so that they do not invite breakage by projecting. A few are quite heat proof and although the containers itself and the food are hot enough the handles are not, and one doesn't scorch fingers unexpectedly.

Heat Proof Kits

A handsome gift for those suspected of being picnic addicts is a leather case containing a luncheon set for four persons—a jar for liquids a table mounted jug for hot or chilled foods and a flat leather case fitting in snugly and containing plates spoons flat knives forks spoons also salt and pepper shakers. Jars and case are leather covered, very durable and take up small space.

In addition to paper tablecloths napkins, etc., there is also a vogue for the waterproof fabrics as picnic necessaries. They are light yet a somewhat sturdier foundation for a meal on knobby green grass. They can be bought in large fine sheet squares or by the yard and will stand a good deal of rough wear. Also the little accidents that occasionally spoil the papers but the table can be effectively quickly from the waterproof cover and neatness quickly restored.

Metal Cups Handy

A set of metal cups with folding handles so made that they nest in each other, is another item of a comfortable picnic kit. Half a dozen of these cups take up little more space than a single ordinary cup. But when ready for use the handles can be opened up and snap into place firmly. Some of the vacuum jugs are so made that a nest of four to six cups fits within the cover, taking up little more room than a single jug.

All picnic equipment should be of fine proof material throughout, or it will be unsightly after a few trips. However a stern kind and utensils for picnic purposes are usually made of sturdy metal.
